MEET GEOFFREY ASHLEY — CREATOR AND WRITER OF FRONTIERS: THE LIVE EXPERIENCE

Currently banished to Hollywood...most likely as hellish, cosmic payback for some seriously bad behavior in a past lifetime...GEOFFREY ASHLEY is a writer, artist and sarcasm enthusiast who enjoys sci-fi, antiques and old cars.

He is especially kind to animals and the elderly and a number of people have told him he is an excellent tipper.

Also, he has an extensive collection of novelty t-shirts and all of his clocks are set to 24-hour time.

Coming of age in America's heartland fostered the twin survival mechanisms of a twisted sense of humor and a cutting sense of sarcasm. These were helped along by having a satellite dish — one of those big-ass, analog ones — which exposed him to influences ranging from Garry Shandling and John Waters to John Korty and Monty Python.

As a child, his aspiration to be both Han Solo and Captain Kirk, as well as George Lucas and Gene Roddenberry, led him to writing. And his writing led him to create FRONTIERS.

He primarily writes comedy, science fiction and, at times, comedic science fiction. In fact, he gravitates toward many types of “genre” concepts, infusing dark, biting humor into all of them while subverting their conventions in surprising ways.
